PLAUEN i. V., DEN 29. April 1927.

To the

American Numismatic Society,

New York.

Gentlemen:

The object of the present is to draw your attention to a collection of seals which has been entrusted to us for sale. It is probably the largest private collection in Germany. It contains more than 100,000 seals, representing an exceedingly valuable collection of documents, all of which are originals; among them there are many gems, such as the seals of celebrated historical personages, statesmen, princes and popes covering a period of five centuries. There is also a large number of seals of countries, cities and colonies which no longer exist at all or have been changed during the course of time; these seals are, of course, of great historical interest. The collection contains the seals of Elisabeth of England, Maria Stuart, Louis XV and XVI, Napoleon and many others as well as those of the European countries and of North and South American States.

The price of the complete collection, which is splendidly arranged and got up is Dollar 30,000.- (Thirty thousand dollars), and this price is proportionately lower than the last similar collections sold in this country. It may be assumed that the collection contains a large number of seals of which no duplicate.

If you are interested in the matter we shall be pleased to furnish further particulars, and to let you have a short list of the different sections.

Very truly yours
